

Abstract

A bearing device comprising a shaft, a housing, a double row of bearings provided between the shaft and the housing and preloaded by a fixed-position preloading method, the double row of bearings having a pair of races with a gap therebetween for preload adjustment, and the bearing device further having a support member for supporting one side of the races in the pre-loading direction, and the support member provided on the side of one of the shaft and the housing.